The purpose of the Diné Language Teacher Institute (DLTI) cohort program is to support the unique needs of Diné communities to revitalize and sustain their languages by increasing the number of Diné language teachers. The 30 credit-hour Certificate Program includes 18-credit hours of required coursework offered by UNM's College of Education and Human Sciences, Native American Studies, and the Navajo Language Program with a specific focus on using language immersion methodologies for Diné language revitalization in community and school-based settings. Students select 12-hours of electives to complete the 30-hour Certificate program.
