The creation of Teaching-Field Concentration for the BSED in Elementary Education is part of an effort to clean up curriculum terminology in the College of Education and bring curriculum into compliance with recognized curriculum terms developed by the Curriculum Terminology Project. Teaching Fields are required by the State of New Mexico for individuals seeking an Elementary Education license. Prior to the implementation of Banner, Concentrations were not transcribed; therefore the College of Education has been using Minors to track Teaching Fields and to insure the notation of Teaching Fields on transcripts. This has caused degree audit problems over the years especially with the Mathematics Teaching Field being confused with the Mathematics Minor offered by the Department of Mathematics and Statistics. The university has asked the COE to convert the Elementary Education teaching field Minors to Concentrations under the BSED in Elementary Education. Given that Concentrations are now transcribed in Banner, this is a viable solution. The proposed Concentration-Teaching Field Mathematics is a change that will accommodate current university terminology and Banner codes, but will not include any changes in actual course requirements that meet New Mexico requirements for licensure. The courses listed for each Concentration-Teaching Field Mathematics Education will be included under Elementary Education Concentration-Teaching Field Requirements in the 2013 Catalog and will be noted on students transcripts. Changes for Other Departmental Programs/Branches: Representatives from Elementary Education have discussed these proposed changes with representatives from Education Specialties; Language, Literacy, and Sociocultural Studies; Taos, Farmington, and Gallup campuses; and CNM. All have granted their approval of these changes.
